

BURLINGTON FREE PRESS, FRIDAY MORNING, MARCH 17, 1854.

Congressmen.—The measure in which some of the strict constructionists' design round an appropriation bill, was seen in the fate which laid the late "Deficiency bill" in the House. It is related of some of the unenlightened Virginians, who never vote in their inland representation, that when the Slaveholders of Virginia sent through the House, the whole Virginia delegation—Democrats to a man, protested against the bill with superhuman energy and eloquence; yet, by a singular coincidence, they all voted for a certain $40,000 for the improvement of the roads leading from Richmond to the State capital, in the winter. Having, by aid of the friends of the internal improvement policy, got that amendment to the bill, they simultaneously rushed into the past office where the debate over it came upon the adoption or rejection of the whole. It was passed, but their names now appear as supporting or approving it.—Advertiser.

Warlike Excitement at Athens.—The special correspondent of the Boston Advertiser writes thus of the warlike stir among the Greeks.

ATHENS, Greece, Thursday, Feb. 9, 1854.—For some time past, ever since the trouble between Russia and Turkey, parts of the latter country bordering on the Adriatic have been in a state of commotion. A few days ago news was received here that they had on the preceding Sabbath broken out in open rebellion, in one of the towns; and since that time it has spread so rapidly that large parties of rebels have been forming and uniting together to throw off the Sultan. In the long time, as is well known, Greece has been in Europe with Russia, their common religion being the ground of union between them; and during the war, the two, in their efforts to repel the Turks, have strengthened each other's cause, and made of victory on the part of the Russians has been accordingly looked for at Athens in St. Petersburg.

The Greeks have been burning to strike a blow at Turkey. Theirs has been a long and hard struggle, but this is destined to be the hour of the lower and undisciplined classes. One of the leading professors of the University has made himself conspicuous by his articles in the papers addressed to the Greek nation, and to the people of the Ionian Islands, and to the free neighbors from Turkish oppression. Today the excitement has been extreme, and during the afternoon the students of the University here, to the number of one hundred, marched with music to the Palace, and called on the King to come out to them, and to award them the rank of "King." He did not appear, but one of the officers about his person came forth, and immediately they demanded permission to march against the Turks. At the same time express messages were despatched that he would receive war as an ally of Russia.
